Connecticut GI (CTGI) physicians provide a non-surgical option for hemorrhoid treatment called Hemorrhoid Banding.

This is an office-based treatment that takes just minutes to complete and may be an excellent option if you suffer from long-term internal hemorrhoid discomfort.

Is this treatment right for you?

The process starts with a simple office visit with a CTGI physician to determine if hemorrhoid banding may help. If appropriate, the initial banding treatment of your internal hemorrhoids will take place during this first visit.

What does this mean for you?

During a banding treatment, your physician will use a gentle suction device to place a small rubber band around the base of an internal hemorrhoid. There is no sedation necessary as most patients find this process painless and you can resume your normal activities right away. It is likely that you will need a second or third visit to address all hemorrhoids.
